

My favorite IT expert

Two years ago, I started taking a web development course, so that I can learn about it. That's where I met Stevan, who is an IT genius. When I saw him the first time, he looked serious and strict, but as soon as I started talking to him, I realized that he is a really nice and social person.

He is really hard-working – he works as a professor at UDG college, he is a coordinator in one private IT company, he is also a lecturer on some of their courses, like this one, and besides all of that, he is working privately on his own projects. How crazy is that? He is such a professional in his job, it would take me years to get on the same level of knowledge as him.

No one in my family has ever studied anything connected to IT technologies, I am the only one so far. But back then, I wasn't so into IT technologies and I haven't had a powerful will to study it. However, after 3 months of learning, Stevan taught me so much and showed me how interesting can it be to be an IT expert. He is my idol and a reason why I want to work as a programmer one day.
